If this is your situation

- You have just been notified of a suspected fraud within your organisation and you want to rapidly clarify the situation and keep a proper control over the risks your organisation may be facing.
- A whistleblower claims that the basis for management incentives was knowingly boosted. At first, you consider the accusations as groundless, but you also realise that this can easily get out of control if you do not handle the situation seriously.
- One of your foreign subsidiaries and its business practices are under the risk of being challenged by regulators. If the situation is not rigorously approached, your business could possibly be severely damaged.
- You have recently learned that several of your products have been subjected to piracy. You need, of course, to stop this but you are also troubled as to how this could have happened and whether a trusted party may have misused your trade secrets.

We can assist you, on a stand-by basis, by providing;

- initial advice and guidance when a possible matter has been initiated with us,
- case tailored investigation of misconduct incidents, including fact collation, analysis of agreements, forensic accounting analysis and advanced interviewing,
- forensic technology services including data preservation, analysis of electronic evidence and e-mail reviews,
- expert witness services in litigation matters emanating from our investigations and assistance with expert advice in electronic discovery matters,
- valuation of economic damages, and,
- assistance with remedial and preventive services, such as evaluation of anti-fraud controls, anti-corruption and antitrust compliance programs.
